Healthcare managers plan, direct, and coordinate medical and health related services. They are often employed in the healthcare delivery sector as managers of hospitals, clinics, and nursing homes, as well as solo and group physician practices. They may also be employed in other sectors of the healthcare industry, such as in pharmaceutical companies, medical device companies, and healthcare consulting firms.

Webster University can prepare you to meet the demand for jobs in the growing field of healthcare management with our MBA degree with the healthcare management emphasis.

What differentiates the Webster emphasis from others? A dynamic curriculum, dedicated and knowledgeable faculty, customized program options, and flexibility.
